New Addition, Same Tradition

There have been many important dates in the history of Newport Central Catholic High School, but none as big as Monday, August 17, 2009. That evening The Most Reverend Bishop Roger J. Foys, Bishop of Covington joined the Newport Central Catholic community as it dedicated the new addition and major renovations to the school's campus.

For the hundreds of volunteers who worked tirelessly over the past five years a dream for our kids became a reality. More than seven hundred alumni, families, friends of the school and community philanthropists have helped fund a new Newport Central Catholic High School. The facilities are definitely 2009, with an eye to the future.

The new 27,000 square foot addition provides seven classrooms and over 18,000 square feet of space for academics, as well as a beautiful new chapel, a new health center facility and a black box theatre. The existing building and school chapel have also been completely renovated.

The Most Reverend Bishop Foys dedicated the new chapel. Principal Bob Noll commented, "As a Catholic school the chapel is definitely the center of our education. What is so outstanding with this project is that it brought together new and improved facilities to address what we profess as Catholic school educators what is so very important – the spirit, the mind and the body – a complete education."

Over the course of the evening, alumni and staff reminisced about their time at NCC's current site. "When they opened this building in 1955 I helped carry in the desks from our Corpus Christi facility," commented 1955 graduate, current head football coach and 50 year teacher at NCC, Bob Schneider.

Bob Noll & Carl Foster cut the ribbon to begin the 2009-2010 school year!

Carl Foster joked that he had spent a lifetime plus at the school. "What is happening today is so very exciting because it is not only needed, but that it prepares the school so well for the future."

Among the highlights of the night was the inaugural production in the Black Box Theatre presented by the newly formed alumni drama club, "The HillToppers." The group plans to perform a musical production annually each summer. "The addition of the Black Box will allow us to add another student performance." said NCC Play Director Kevan Brown. Plans are in the works for a winter performance.

The celebration continued when NCC opened the 2009/2010 school year with 425 students on August 19. "It is in many ways a new beginning, but it is one that is possible only because of the generosity of our school's community," Noll said. "An extraordinary amount of time, talent and treasure made what you see before you a reality. And we are so very grateful!"

The NCC student body, faculty and staff celebrated the opening of school with a special ribbon cutting ceremony. The entire school community was clad in t-shirts picturing the new look of the school and reading, "New Addition, Same Tradition."

Conner Bartels, Quinn Anost and Sam Barth cheer with excitement & wait anxiously to begin their freshman year.
